

Perspectives on D-modules

David Nadler
Northwestern University

Abstract: D-modules are central objects in algebraic analysis, geometric representation theory, symplectic topology, and mathematical physics. I plan to survey various perspectives on their structure, including their origins as algebraic models of linear PDE, their appearance as branes in topological A-models, and their interpretation as a categorification of cyclic homology. No prior acquaintance with D-modules will be assumed.